Blood Bank Refrigerators

KERONE's Blood Bank Refrigerators are meticulously engineered to meet the stringent storage requirements of blood banks and hospitals. These refrigerators are designed to maintain blood and plasma at optimal temperatures between 1 and 6°C, ensuring their effectiveness for life-saving procedures. The design incorporates advanced safety features to prevent tampering and offers robust temperature controls and event alarms tailored to specific needs. This ensures that the stored products are always ready for emergency use, providing peace of mind to medical professionals. The refrigeration units are also equipped with high-precision temperature monitoring systems that ensure consistent and reliable performance, making them ideal for critical medical storage.

Constructed with corrosion-free metal components and advanced polyurethane insulation, these refrigerators provide maximum thermal efficiency and durability. This high-quality construction guarantees long service life, reducing maintenance costs and ensuring dependable operation. KERONE offers both standard and customizable models to meet the diverse requirements of customers in India and abroad. Their Blood Bank Refrigerators are widely trusted for their reliability, supporting the critical storage needs of blood, vaccines, primers, and culture media. Used extensively in blood banks, hospitals, and research institutes, these refrigerators reflect KERONE's commitment to delivering high-quality, precision-engineered products that enhance the safety and effectiveness of medical storage solutions.
